

American Heritage Homes

Shem and Seth Foster (yes, they are brothers) have an extensive construction background that began as young men in the Southeastern region of Utah. Both Foster boys quickly advanced from working with their father in the family wood chopping business, to working with several local contractors. As they grew older, they parted ways and moved to different states, where both advanced up the construction "ladder." In 2009, the brothers combined their building expertise and American Heritage Homes was born. Even though they are brothers, they have very different talents which complement each other very efficiently, and anyone who has the opportunity to work with them will agree that these "Foster Brothers" make an unstoppable team. American Heritage Homes specializes in designing and building time-honored traditions...one exquisite home at a time.
